Due by: 8/10/2023

Overview:

Health equity is a societal imperative that looms large over the health care system. A plethora of research and data analytics proves that health disparities exist. The causes are complex and systemic. Advancing health equity requires a deliberate and sustained effort by health care organizations to create systems that identify and address these issues.

Participants in this Improvement Community Will:

- Review techniques for integrating health equity as a strategic priority
- Develop plans to engage key stakeholders (e.g., training staff and leaders, building partnerships with patients, families and communities)
- Describe how to leverage quality and performance improvement methods and how they can advance health equity
- Define the steps to disaggregate data to identify patient populations experiencing poor outcomes
- Quantify results and communicate efforts taken to address health disparities
